Speak softly and carry a large stick. The method is due to a game of bowling where the player throwing the ball is . At the head of the team 2 years ago when we bought the practice - there are already good teachers - but we are planing to grow and move forward with the help of good students with many talents. The management of the team is planed to have various but fully qualified coaches. How to Create a Terrain in Sketchup. Well I just recently downloaded Sketchup 8, mostly to learn it and make a few simple models. I was looking for a tool to draw a map, but I have no idea how to make it look nice. This is very similar to a terrain, only a map. I have heard of Sketchup, so I figured I would at least give that a try. Sketchup, 3ds Max, and Google Earth are free. They all work better in Windows, but they work. The best one would be Sketchup, since I think it works the best in all three operating systems. 3dsmax is ok, as is Google Earth. Free includes: Sketchup 8.0, 3ds max 2008 and Google earth 5.0. Good to see the first Post, let me know if you need any more info. The visual is a bit hard to explain, so I made a short video. If you prefer just listen to the voice, here is the link, rather than watching it: Sketchup Vs. 3ds Max. This is a tough question, as it is hard to compare them. Each one can do a specific task, but neither one is the 'be all and end all' software. It depends on what you require. I personally prefer Sketchup, but you are correct, it can't do everything Max does, and there is a learning curve before it is easy to use. Also, I think you are looking for a program that will create a map for you. Try mapping out your house, or any building you want to record it's dimensions, and then use one of the programs mentioned above. They can read 2d/3d files and can hold those data. For a really nice interactive model, try a program called Sketchup Web. It is freeware and will let you walk around it. In my opinion, this works better than Google Earth or Windows Live Map, but you will have to use a internet browser. In
